About Foundation Fighting Blindness

The Foundation Fighting Blindness was established in 1971 by a passionate group of families driven to find treatments and cures for inherited retinal diseases that were affecting their loved ones. At that time, little was known about these blinding retinal diseases. Very little research was being done, and there were no clinical trials for potential treatments.

The Foundation's goal was clear and focused: To drive the research that would lead to preventions, treatments, and cures for blinding retinal diseases, including age-related macular degeneration, retinitis pigmentosa, Usher syndrome, Stargardt disease and Leber congenital amaurosis (LCA). Together these conditions affect more than 10 million Americans and millions more throughout the world.

Today, the Foundation Fighting Blindness is the world's leading private funder of retinal disease research. That funding has been a driving force behind the progress toward cures, including the identification of more than 270 genes linked to retinal disease, and the launch of over 40 clinical trials for potential treatments.

Dear Public Service Director,

Being blind doesn't always look how others may think. Blinding diseases such as retinitis pigmentosa (RP), Stargardt disease and Usher syndrome are commonly diagnosed during childhood or young adulthood. RP can cause severe vision loss leading to legal and/or complete blindness, while children born with Usher syndrome can have varying degrees of deafness and vision loss.

Age-related macular degeneration (AMD) is characterized by a progressive loss of central vision. It is the leading cause of blindness in adults over age 55 in the U.S. and other developed countries. While living with vision loss can be difficult there are resources and support available to those who need it.

The Foundation Fighting Blindness, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, was established in 1971 by a passionate group of families driven to find treatments and cures for inherited retinal diseases that were affecting their loved ones. At that time, little was known about these blinding retinal diseases, with little research being done and no clinical trials for potential treatments.

Today, the Foundation Fighting Blindness is the world's leading private funder of retinal disease research. That funding has been a driving force behind the progress toward cures, including the identification of more than 270 genes linked to retinal disease, and the launch of over 40 clinical trials for potential treatments.

We hope that you will help inform your community about the importance of research for blinding diseases by airing the new PSA titled "Being Blind" (:60, :30, :15). The PSA addresses the misconceptions of what blindness looks like and demonstrates how those affected by blindness can overcome their challenges and highlights the ways in which the Foundation Fighting Blindness works to find treatments and cures for blinding diseases. The PSA, which is available in donate and non-donate versions, also encourages audiences to visit FightingBlindness.org for more information. We hope that you will air this PSA, which has no end date for use, as soon and as often as possible.

Thank you in advance for your support of this public service campaign.

Sincerely,

Chris Adams
Vice President, Marketing & Communications
